

October 17, 2018

Amazon Tests Boundaries of What It Means to Be a Product Seller

Jim Rotondo, Jennifer Shukla, and Julia Sorensen authored an article, "Amazon Tests Boundaries of What It Means to Be a Product Seller," published by Bloomberg BNA's Product Liability & Toxics Law News. The article discusses several recent court decisions that held that Amazon is not a product seller for purposes of product liability law and is not liable for allegedly defective products sold on the Amazon marketplace. The article examines what these decisions may mean for product liability law in the future.

Authors

James H. Rotondo

Partner

Hartford, CT | (860) 275-0197

jhrotondo@daypitney.com