Mind the Gap: Federal Selectivity and New Jersey Enforcement

Federal enforcement priorities may be shifting, but corporate risk in New Jersey remains as significant as ever.

In an article for the New Jersey Law Journal, Day Pitney Litigation Partner Naju Lathia examines how recent changes to Department of Justice guidance have reshaped the federal corporate enforcement landscape and what they mean for businesses operating in New Jersey. The article outlines practical steps companies can take to strengthen compliance programs, conduct effective internal investigations, evaluate voluntary self-disclosure, cooperate with regulators, and undertake meaningful remediation to better navigate state and federal enforcement.
