Digital assets have more value than we think

Amy Lonergan co-authored an article, "Digital assets have more value than we think," published in Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly. The article discusses the importance of managing digital property and cybersecurity risk as an integral part of estate planning and wealth management. The article describes proper cybersecurity as critical to prevent online fraud, financial theft and identity theft and offers several precautions clients can and should take to protect their digital assets. "While there is no one-size-fits-all solution that will work for everyone, it is important to identify security issues and threats," the article says. Amy co-authored the article with Joshua Miller, a managing director and senior wealth strategist in the Boston office of Atlantic Trust Private Wealth Management.
