October 25, 2013

Connecticut Now Has Patent Litigation Rules

Jonathan Tropp authored an October 25 article for the Connecticut Law Tribune on the approval of a uniform Standing Order in Patent Cases by the District of Connecticut. He writes: "Though not yet universally adopted in this district, the approval of a form of Standing Order in Patent Cases represents the recognition that patent cases have unique planning needs and a substantial step towards the goal of more efficiently disposing of these often complex cases."

The full article can be found here.

Authors

Jonathan B. Tropp
Partner

New Haven, CT | (203) 977-7337

jbtropp@daypitney.com