Overview

Ali Slavet is a partner in Day Pitney's Corporate and Business Law department. She represents early-stage and middle market companies, principals and executives, private equity and venture funds, family offices, and investors in a wide range of corporate transactions and general corporate matters. Her practice includes entity formation and structuring, private offerings of equity and debt, commercial lending transactions, mergers and acquisitions, and ongoing general corporate and governance matters.

Ali advises clients across a wide range of industries, including consumer products, food and beverage, and technology, and through all stages of the business lifecycle. She works closely with clients to structure their businesses, support growth initiatives, and execute strategic transactions, including complex mergers, consolidations, acquisitions, and dispositions. Ali is a trusted legal and business advisor to her clients, and supports them in their corporate transactional activities, their day-to-day commercial operations, and their general corporate needs.
