Overview

Rachel Gonzalez is Chair of Day Pitney's Employment and Labor practice and a trusted advisor to management teams navigating high-stakes workplace challenges. She partners with executives, in-house counsel, and human resources leaders to develop forward-thinking, business-aligned labor and employment strategies that protect enterprise value and mitigate risk.

Rachel advises domestic and multinational companies — including foreign corporations establishing U.S. operations — on the full spectrum of U.S. employment and labor law compliance. She is particularly sought after for her ability to guide organizations through complex workforce issues arising in mergers, acquisitions, restructurings, stock and asset transactions, plant closings, and relocations. Over the course of her career, she has counseled clients in significant monetary value transactions, ensuring seamless workforce integration and proactive risk management.

A seasoned labor strategist, Rachel represents employers in union organizing campaigns, collective bargaining negotiations, labor arbitrations, and proceedings before the National Labor Relations Board. She works closely with leadership teams on union avoidance strategies, strike preparedness, and crisis response, including strike-related injunction proceedings. Clients value her steady guidance in contentious environments and her ability to balance legal risk with operational realities.

Rachel also serves as outside employment counsel to companies seeking practical, preventative guidance on wage and hour compliance, workplace investigations, executive terminations, employee leave and accommodation issues, and evolving federal and state employment regulations. When disputes arise, she aggressively defends employers in state and federal courts and before administrative agencies.

Before entering private practice, Rachel worked as a human resources professional in both unionized and non-unionized facilities in the United States and Sweden — experience that gives her a unique, management-side perspective and enhances her credibility with executive leadership. During law school, she worked with the National Labor Relations Board in Hartford, Connecticut.

In addition to leading the firm's Employment and Labor practice, Rachel is active in firm diversity initiatives, serving in a leadership role with the Day Pitney Diverse Attorneys Network and is on the firm's Diversity Committee. She previously chaired and co-chaired the firm's Hiring Committee.
