Overview

Scott Goodman counsels publicly and privately held companies on corporate, transactional and securities law matters. He primarily practices in the areas of mergers and acquisitions, including stock and asset acquisitions and dispositions, corporate reorganizations, public offerings, private placements, venture capital transactions and compliance with public reporting responsibilities, including duties under the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. Scott has worked on initial public offerings and other offerings registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, as well as private offerings exempt from registration. His transactional and counseling practice covers a wide array of industries, with substantial experience in, and emphasis on, the manufacturing, energy and banking sectors, as well as various service industries. Scott advises clients on general corporate, business and contractual matters. Scott also counsels senior management and boards of directors of both publicly and privately held companies regarding corporate governance issues, fiduciary duties and other compliance matters.
