Day Pitney Celebrates Centennial With Hartford Block Party

The firm was featured in an article, "Day Pitney Celebrates Centennial With Hartford Block Party," published by the Connecticut Law Tribune. The piece covers Day Pitney's block party on Pratt Street in downtown Hartford as well as the firm's long history of giving back to the community in and around Hartford.

As noted in the article, to mark the centennial, Day Pitney donated 100-plus bicycles and helmets to local youth organizations after taking up a collection at each of the firm's 13 offices. Employees in the Hartford office assembled the bikes, which were displayed at the block party and delivered the following day. "We are very proud of reaching this milestone, which is a testament to our long-standing relationships and deep commitment to the community," said Tom Goldberg, Day Pitney's managing partner. "More importantly, we are thrilled to mark this occasion by giving back to the community through these deserving organizations."
