OVERVIEW

Jennifer Palmer, a commercial litigator, represents clients in complex business disputes and bankruptcy matters.

Jennifer has a broad range of experience representing companies and individuals in federal and state court litigation, including claims involving breach of contract, tortious interference with contract, breach of fiduciary duty, fraud, securities laws violations, intellectual property, unfair trade practices and employment issues. She represents secured and unsecured creditors in bankruptcy proceedings and has significant experience navigating complex chapter 11 cases. Jennifer has served clients in a number of industries, including the finance, telecommunications, insurance, aerospace, consumer products, energy and pharmaceutical industries. In addition, she has extensive experience representing clients in international arbitration proceedings, including under the ICC and ICSID arbitration rules.

Jennifer served as a judicial clerk to the Honorable Charles P. Sifton of the United States District Court in the Eastern District of New York. Before joining Day Pitney, she practiced law in New York and Paris at a major international law firm. Jennifer is fluent in French and Spanish.
